Comments

Allows family members of disabled people to be certified and compensated as care givers. It should result in better care at comparable costs.

There is no Constitutional authority given for care of the disabled or injured; it is not the protection of individual rights. I, individually, do not have the unalienable right to have others (government) care for me because I am disabled, injured or poor. Therefore, I, nor we, cannot delegate that power to government.

Weighted Rating: -0.50. Unweighted Rating: -0.50.
