Comments

Social engineering and legislative micromanagement. Get government out of the marriage business. Make it a civil contract, and leave it alone, a policy which served Rome well for over a thousand years.

This a blatant invasion into a person's individual rights. Where in the Constitution does it give government any right to determine who or when I marry? A person's rights include their life, liberty, and pursuit of happiness. If I as an individual tried to stop someone from marrying, it would be a criminal action. Why can the government, who is an extension of my rights, then do the same act and think it is not criminal.
